REDSKINS OPEN SECOND PRESEASON UNDER JIM ZORN WITH SHORT TRIP TO BALTIMORE

The Redskins and Ravens will get together in the pre-season for the fifth time in seven seasons on Thursday as Washington takes the short trip north to visit M&T Bank Stadium.

Kickoff is set for 7:30 p.m. The game can be seen locally on NBC4 and Comcast SportsNet. Mike Patrick will call the play-by-play with Joe Theismann adding color analysis. Lindsay Czarniak and Kelli Johnson will serve as the sideline reporters.

The game can also be heard on the Redskins Radio Network with Larry Michael on the play-by-play, former Redskins greats and Pro Football Hall of Fame members Sam Huff and Sonny Jurgensen adding color, and Doc Walker reporting from the sideline.

The preseason series between the clubs is tied at 2-2, with the Redskins winning the most recent matchup in 2007,

Both clubs enter 2009 with high hopes. Following an 8-8 campaign, Washington enters its second season under the direction of Head Coach Jim Zorn, while Baltimore was resurgent last year under new head coach Jim Harbaugh and rookie quarterback Joe Flacco, finishing with an 11-5 record and a spot in the AFC Championship Game.

Despite a new coaching staff implementing an entirely new offensive system in 2008, the Redskins jumped out to a 6-2 start. Now, that same coaching staff returns almost completely intact, and the players have a full year of experience in the system.

"This year, I can take a step back and not have to teach as much," Zorn said. "The coaches are more efficient in what they're doing. So the startup costs from last year are turning into reaping the benefits of our investments this year."

Under the direction of Defensive Coordinator Greg Blache, the Redskins defense was impressive last year, finishing fourth in yards allowed and sixth in points allowed. Eight starters return from the unit, including standouts London Fletcher, Chris Horton, LaRon Landry and Carlos Rogers, but perhaps the most excitement surrounds All-Pro defensive tackle Albert Haynesworth, who was the prize of the 2009 free agent class.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS HEAD COACH JIM ZORN

Jim Zorn enters his second season with the Washington Redskins after being named the franchise's 27th head coach on February 10, 2008.

The 2008 campaign marked Zorn's first season as a head coach in the National Football League, and he guided the Redskins to an 8-8 record in the competitive NFC East. Under Zorn, the Redskins recorded a pair of wins over the Philadelphia Eagles, who advanced to the NFC Championship Game, and an impressive victory over the eventual NFC Champion Arizona Cardinals.

Well-regarded around the NFL for his offensive acumen, Zorn was originally hired as the Redskins' offensive coordinator on Jan. 26, 2008. He impressed Redskins Owner Daniel M. Snyder and Executive Vice President of Football Operations Vinny Cerrato so much that, two weeks later, they decided to offer him the head coaching job.

Zorn made an instant impact in 2008 as the Redskins raced out to a 6-2 start, including consecutive road wins at Dallas and Philadelphia. Zorn complemented the Redskins' bruising running attack with his version of the West Coast Offense, a combination that helped the Redskins finish eighth in the NFL in rushing yards per game (130.9).

Under Zorn's guidance, defensive coordinator Greg Blache oversaw a Redskins defensive unit that finished second in the NFC and fourth in the NFL in overall defense, limiting opponents to 288.8 yards per game. Washington also allowed the sixth fewest points per game (18.5) in the league in 2008.

Zorn's new offense paid immediate dividends as four starters earned Pro Bowl honors. Running back Clinton Portis, who earned his second Pro Bowl selection and his first in five seasons with the Redskins, finished fourth in the NFL in rushing yards (1,487). Tight end Chris Cooley earned his second consecutive Pro Bowl appearance and led the team with a career-high 83 receptions for 849 yards. Tackle Chris Samuels earned his sixth Pro Bowl appearance - marking the third-most in franchise history - while fullback Mike Sellers earned his first Pro Bowl selection in his eighth NFL season.

Zorn, an NFL quarterback from 1976-87 and an NFL assistant coach for 11 years, has an approach that he describes as "constant and consistent" in terms of how he manages coaches and players. His Redskins team reflects his philosophy of playing smart, steady, and mistake-free football.

That was demonstrated early as the Redskins became the first team in NFL history to not record an offensive turnover in its first five games. Quarterback Jason Campbell was perhaps the greatest beneficiary of Zorn's expertise with the quarterback position. Zorn played an instrumental role in the fifth-year quarterback's maturation into an efficient starting quarterback in the National Football League.

In his second season as starter, Campbell established career highs in completions (315), passing attempts (506), passing yards (3,245), touchdown passes (13) and passer rating (84.3). Additionally, Campbell showed rapid improvement under Zorn in protecting the football as he finished first in the NFL in interception percentage (1.2), throwing just six interceptions in 506 passing attempts. During Zorn's first offseason, he introduced unique quarterback drills that had a direct impact on Campbell's productivity. Campbell established a club record by throwing 271 consecutive passes without an interception, the fifth-longest streak in NFL history.

Zorn joined the Redskins from the Seattle Seahawks where he spent seven seasons (2001-07) as quarterbacks coach.

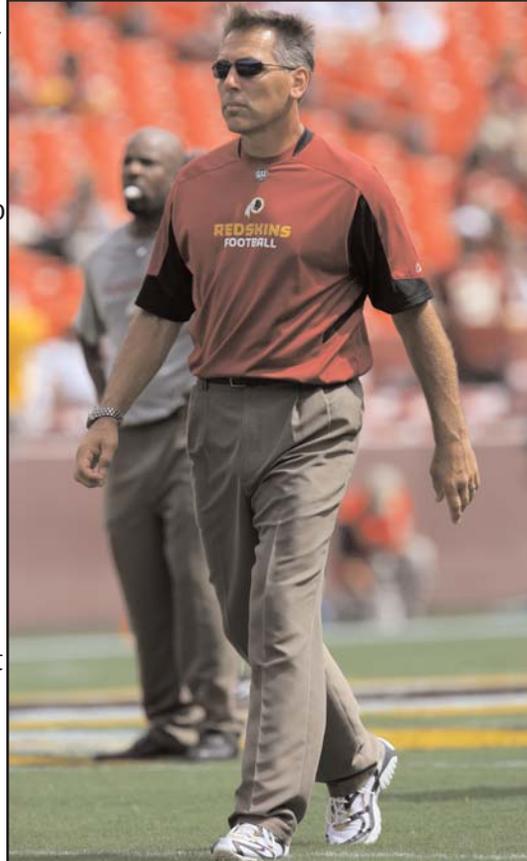

During his time in Seattle, Zorn worked with Seahawks Head Coach Mike Holmgren and Offensive Coordinator Gil Haskell in implementing the team's offense while also furthering the development of the team's quarterbacks.

Zorn tutored QB Matt Hasselbeck who set a franchise record with 3,841 passing yards in 2003. Hasselbeck has become the franchise's most-efficient passer (85.1 rating) while joining Zorn as the only Seahawks quarterback to pass for 3,000-plus yards in three consecutive seasons.

In 2007 under Zorn, Hasselbeck set Seattle single-season marks for attempts (562), completions (352) and yards (3,966). He also threw for a career-high 28 touchdowns en route to his third Pro Bowl selection.

In 2006, Hasselbeck started just 12 games after suffering a knee injury in the middle of the season and finished the year with a fractured finger on his left hand. In the interim, Zorn helped with the development of Seneca Wallace, who completed 58 percent of his passes, tossed eight touchdowns, and posted a 76.2 passer rating and a 2-2 record in the most extensive playing time of his four-year career.

In 2005, Zorn guided Hasselbeck to his second Pro Bowl appearance as he became the NFC's top-rated passer (4th NFL) with a 98.2 rating en route to Super Bowl XL. Hasselbeck directed the NFL's second-ranked offense to a franchise-record 11 consecutive wins. In his four December games, he posted the fourth-best passer rating in NFL history (135.5), including 10 touchdowns and just one interception, while completing 76 percent of his passes.

Zorn's 2002 campaign had Trent Dilfer open the season as the starter and concluded with Hasselbeck under center. Seattle's passing attack ranked third in the NFL, averaging 254.9 yards a game. Hasselbeck finished the season ranked first in the NFC with a 63.7 completion percentage and second in the NFC with a 87.8 passer rating. Hasselbeck passed for more than 300 yards four times, including a franchise-record 449 in the season finale at San Diego. Hasselbeck joined Zorn as the only Seahawks quarterbacks to pass for at least 300 yards in back-to-back games. Zorn accomplished the feat in 1979 and 1981.

Zorn's 2001 quarterback crop included starter Hasselbeck, Super Bowl XXXV quarterback Dilfer and 2000 part-time starter Brock Huard. Zorn groomed Hasselbeck and helped the first-year starter to become the AFC's fifth-rated passer on third down with a rating of 80.6.

Zorn joined the Seahawks as quarterbacks coach after serving in the same capacity with the Detroit Lions (1998-00). He was instrumental in the development of rookie quarterback Charlie Batch in 1998. Batch's 88.3 passer rating that season ranks as the fourth-highest rookie mark in NFL history. Zorn broke into the NFL coaching ranks as an offensive assistant for the Seahawks in 1997.

Zorn spent eight seasons in the collegiate ranks before his pro debut. He spent two seasons (1995-96) as quarterbacks coach at the University of Minnesota and three seasons (1992-94) as the offensive coordinator at Utah State. His first collegiate coaching job was as an offensive assistant/quarterbacks and wide receivers coach at Boise State from 1989-91.

His professional playing career began in the Seahawks' inaugural 1976 season, where he started all 14 games at quarterback. He went on to play nine seasons for the Seahawks. After departing Seattle, he finished his playing career with the Green Bay Packers (1985), the Canadian Football League's Winnipeg Blue Bombers (1986) and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers (1987).

Zorn is one of only eight players inducted to the Seahawks' Ring of Honor. He was named NFC Offensive Rookie of the Year (1976) and ranks third in the Seahawks' record book behind Dave Krieg and Hasselbeck in yards (20,122), completions (1,593), attempts (2,992), and touchdowns (107). His three consecutive 3,000-yard seasons were tops in team history, since broken by Hasselbeck in 2005, and he was the first Seattle quarterback to record back-to-back 300-plus yard passing games - a feat he accomplished twice. Zorn was recently inducted into the State of Washington Sports Hall of Fame during a pregame ceremony prior to the Redskins' game at Seattle on November 23, 2008.

Zorn, 56, and his wife, Joy, have four children: daughters Rachael, Sarah, and Danielle, and son Isaac. Rachael is married to Neal Mitchell, and the two are proud parents of daughter Hollis Joy.

Jim and Joy Zorn are active in Medical Teams International and Pro Athletes Outreach. Medical Teams International is dedicated to implementing and supporting programs that address the causes and effects of inadequate health care worldwide. Their teams of medical, dental and other health professionals volunteer to serve in field stations, hospitals and clinics worldwide.

During the 2009 offseason, the Zorns were joined by the Holmgren family while hosting a fundraising event for Medical Teams International at FedExField.

Pro Athletes Outreach is a Christian conference ministry, which is led by former NFL offensive tackle Norm Evans and his wife, Bobbie. PAO trains professional athletes/coaches and their wives to become leaders in their home, community and in all areas of their lives.

BLACHE'S MOSH

Greg Blache enters his second season as the Redskins defensive coordinator after four seasons directing the defensive line. Blache was named defensive coordinator on January 26, 2008.

Under Blache's leadership, the Redskins finished fourth in overall defense in 2008, the fourth time in his five seasons with Washington the unit finished in the top 10 in the NFL (third in 2004, ninth in 2005 and eighth in 2007).

Blache's 2008 squad was forced to overcome a myriad of injuries to starters on both the defensive line and secondary, yet still finished among the top 10 in rush (eighth) and pass (seventh) defense. It allowed the sixth-fewest points in the league per game (18.5).

A veteran of 22 NFL seasons, Blache focuses on the importance of playing strong fundamental football, demonstrated by his unit's physical play in run defense. Washington limited opponents to just 95.4 rushing yards per game last season and only three opposing players totaled more than 100 yards rushing in a single game.

Additionally, Blache's secondary proved to be the strength of the defense despite the fact that his defensive backfield had 10 different starting lineups in 16 games in 2008. The Redskins defense limited opponents to just 193.4 passing yards per game and helped force the highest percentage of three-and-outs in the NFL.

Blache's leadership was also instrumental in developing unheralded seventh-round pick Chris Horton into a starting safety and member of Pro Football Weekly's All-Rookie Team, and seamlessly integrating cornerback DeAngelo Hall into the defense.

Perhaps the most impressive streak for the defense came in the middle of the season when, over a five game span, it held all five opponents to less than 275 yards of total offense, the first time the Redskins had accomplished a streak of that length since 1989.

In 2007, Blache was an integral part of helping the Redskins defense improve to eighth overall after being the 31st-ranked unit in 2006.

Blache's defensive line played a pivotal role as Washington finished fourth in the NFL in rush yardage allowed (91.3 avg.) in 2007 - a significant improvement from 2006 in which they finished 27th in the NFL (137.3 avg.) in the same category. Washington improved 23 spots in rushing defense in 2007, trailing only Tennessee, which moved up 25 places (30th overall to fifth overall).

In 2005, Blache's defensive line helped the Redskins finish ninth overall in total defense for the second consecutive year. In his first season with the Redskins in 2004, Blache made an immediate impact as Washington's defensive unit finished third overall and second in rush yardage allowed (81.5 avg.) - which represents the best overall ranking since Washington finished atop the league in rushing yards allowed with 80.6 yards per game in 1983.

Prior to joining the Redskins, Blache spent five seasons with the Chicago Bears as defensive coordinator. During his time in Chicago, the Bears defense saw tremendous improvement.

In 2003, his defense finished the season fifth in the NFC in total defense, and 14th in the NFL, the team's highest league ranking since 1998. During his tenure, Blache's defenses forced 138 turnovers, including 37 in 2001, the most by a Bears defense since 1990, and accounted for 13 touchdowns (two in 1999, four in 2000, five in 2001, one in 2002, and one in 2003).

The Redskins have established a decade-long tradition of boasting one of the NFL's stingiest defenses, which has continued in the five years Blache has been part of the coaching staff and two seasons he has served as defensive coordinator.

Washington is one of five franchise (Baltimore, New England, Pittsburgh and Tampa Bay) to finish in the top five in overall defense in four of the last five years. It is also one of four teams (Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Tampa Bay) to rank in the top 10 overall seven times since 2000.

REDSKINS DEFENSIVE RANKINGS THIS DECADE

Year	Total	Rush	Pass
2008	4	8	7
2007	8	4	16
2006	31	27	23
2005	9	13	10
2004	3	2	7
2003	25	24	14
2002	5	12	5
2001	10	20	6
2000	4	22	2
Since 2000	4	13	3
Since 2004	4	6	8

The Redskins defense returns eight starters from a unit that allowed the six-fewest points in the NFL last season. It has also welcomed the addition of one of the game's most dominant players in two-time All-Pro defensive tackle Albert Haynesworth and linebacker/defensive end Brian Orakpo, the team's first-round draft pick (No. 13 overall) in last April's draft.

Also returning are former starters Phillip Daniels and Reed Doughty. Daniels, a formidable run-stopper from his left defensive end spot, missed all of last season with a torn ACL. Doughty, who began last season as a starting safety, had his season cut short after playing in only four games because of illness and injury.

FAN INFORMATION AND INVITATION

Before coming to training camp, Redskins fans should fill out their Training Camp Fan Invitation, which is available now on www.redskins.com. Fans should print out the invitation and bring it with them when they visit Redskins Park.

The Fan Invitations help the Redskins gauge how many visitors will be attending practice each day. There is no cost for fans to attend Training Camp.

Throughout 2008 Redskins Training Camp Presented by RE/MAX, fans can call the Redskins Training Camp Hotline at 703-726-7411 for the day's practice schedule, as well as directions to Redskins Park.

- Similar to past years, there will be no bleachers on-site. Fans are encouraged to bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on during practice, overlooking the practice fields. Picnic tables will also be available. Otherwise, visitors to Redskins Training Camp can walk around designated areas around the practice field to watch their favorite players.
- Handicapped parking is available on-site at Redskins Training Camp. Upon arrival Redskins staff members will direct fans needing assistance. There will also be a seating area set aside for wheelchairs near the practice fields.
- For security purposes, all bags brought into Redskins Training Camp will be searched by team security.
- The following items are prohibited at Redskins Training Camp: alcohol and illegal drugs, weapons, firearms, glass bottles, video cameras, and animals (except for certified guide dogs assisting disabled guests).
- Snacks and drinks will be available for sale to fans on-site.
- Practices open to the public are free of charge. Parking lots will open approximately 1-1½ hours prior to the start of each open practice and gates will open approximately one hour prior to the start of each open practice.

FAN APPRECIATION DAY

The Redskins are set to host Fan Appreciation Day on Saturday, Aug. 8 at Redskins Park in Loudoun County, Va.

The day's events include an intra-squad scrimmage, an address by head coach Jim Zorn, free raffles, performances by the Redskins Marching Band and the Redskins Cheerleaders, and opportunities for photographs with the Redskins' Super Bowl trophies.

Admission and parking are free.

Parking lots at Redskins Park open at 11:30 a.m. and gates open at 12 noon.

Last year, more than 28,000 spectators were in attendance at Fan Appreciation Day, so fans are encouraged to arrive early.

Following performances by the Redskins Cheerleaders and the Redskins Marching Band, Zorn is scheduled to address the crowd at approximately 1:10 p.m.

Ten minutes later, Redskins players are scheduled to begin warm-ups and compete in drills.

At 2 p.m., the intra-squad scrimmage is set to begin.

Last year, the scrimmage featured the first-team offense going against the first-team defense in several series. Look for second- and third-team players to get plenty of work as well.

All fans in attendance are eligible for free raffles to win autographed Redskins merchandise. The raffles are available at the entrance to training camp. The giveaways are announced throughout the day.

Raffles available at Fan Appreciation Day:

Jason Campbell Replica Jersey
London Fletcher Panel Ball
LaRon Landry Replica Jersey
Clinton Portis Panel Ball
Carlos Rogers Replica Jersey
Chris Cooley Replica Jersey
Colt Brennan Panel Ball
Antwaan Randle El Replica Jersey

REDSKINS PROGRAMMING

The Redskins Broadcast Network is the TV and Radio production department of the team. The content delivered by RBN includes preseason game broadcasts on NBC4 and Comcast SportsNet. In addition to its nightly Redskins Nation broadcast on Comcast SportsNet at 6 and 10:30 p.m., RBN produces five original TV shows each season broadcast in the Washington, D.C. region:

INSIDE THE REDSKINS One-hour show airs Saturday mornings on NBC4 from 9:30-10:30 a.m. starting on August 22 and continuing thru January 2, 2010.

JIM ZORN COACHES SHOW Half-hour airs Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. on NBC4 starting on August 22 and continuing thru January 2.

REDSKINS LATE NIGHT Half-hour show airing Sunday mornings at 1:30 a.m. on NBC4 starting on August 23 and continuing thru January 3.

REDSKINS GAME DAY Half-hour show airing Sunday mornings at 11 a.m. on FOX 5 starting on September 13 and continuing thru January 3.

REDSKINS GAME PLAN Half-hour show airing Sunday mornings at 11:30 a.m. on NBC 4 starting on August 23 and continuing thru January 3.

RBN produces content for Redskins.comTV, which features exclusive interviews with coaches, players and team officials, the Redskins Cheerleaders at the annual swimsuit calendar shoots, and on-field action from the practice fields at Redskins Park to game day at FedExField. The site works under a theme of "Redskins Unfiltered," in an effort to provide Redskins fans with complete, unedited press conferences and immediate news and information.

The Executive Producer of RBN is Larry Michael, the Voice of the Washington Redskins.

His staff includes RBN veterans Rebecca Mejia, Director of Production; Charlie Broyhill, Coordinating Producer; and Megan Imbert, Producer. Also, James Heuser, Producer; Jordan Beane, Technical Coordinator; and Ed Clark, Producer. From the sideline to the locker room, Redskins Broadcast Network goes where no other media outlet can go, for the real story on the Washington Redskins, 365 days a year.

PORT AUTHORITY

Since entering the National Football League in 2002, Clinton Portis has established himself as one of the premier running backs in football. With 9,202 career rushing yards, Portis ranks fourth among players who are currently on an NFL roster. His 72 career rushing touchdowns and 92.0 rushing yards per game average (minimum 32 games) both rank second among that group, trailing only San Diego's LaDainian Tomlinson. Portis' 4.5 yards per carry average ranks fifth among active league running backs with at least 750 career carries, trailing Frank Gore, Fred Taylor, Brian Westbrook and Larry Johnson.

RUSHING YARDS AMONG RUNNING BACKS ON NFL ROSTERS

Player	Team	Yards	Seasons
LaDainian Tomlinson	San Diego	11,760	8
Fred Taylor	New England	11,271	11
Jamal Lewis	Cleveland	10,107	8

Portis is also rapidly establishing his place in Redskins history as he already ranks second in club annals in rushing yards and third in rushing attempts and rushing touchdowns, after just five seasons with the team.

With 1,370 rushing yards in 2009, Portis would surpass Hall of Famer John Riggins as the franchise's all-time leader. Portis needs three more rushing touchdowns to move past Stephen Davis for second place all-time in club history, trailing only Riggins.

Stephen Davis	1996-2002	5,790	1,383	45
Terry Allen	1995-98	4,086	1,043	37

In 2008, Portis reached the 1,250-yard plateau for the sixth time in seven professional seasons. He became the eighth player to reach the 1,250-yard figure six times in his career, joining Walter Payton (9), Barry Sanders (9), Jim Brown (7), Emmitt Smith (7), Eric Dickerson (6), Curtis Martin (6) and LaDainian Tomlinson (6). He joined Sanders, Dickerson and Tomlinson as the only players to reach 1,250 rushing yards six times in their first seven seasons. Sanders is the only one to hit the mark in seven of his first eight seasons.

The only year Portis did not reach the mark was in 2006 when he played in only eight games because of injury.

Additionally, Portis is one of only five players in league history to average at least 110.0 scrimmage yards per game (minimum 80 games). The five players to average at least 110.0 scrimmage yards per game are either still active or members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Portis' 1,487 yards in 2008 ranked fourth in the NFL, while his nine rushing touchdowns tied for 13th in the league and seventh in the NFC. He was also fourth in the NFL with 1,705 total yards from scrimmage.

Portis' 86 total first downs tied for the league lead and his 34 runs of 10 or more yards ranked sixth.

Portis also proved to be at his best late in the game as his 378 fourth-quarter rushing yards were fourth in the league, to Houston's Steve Slaton, Atlanta's Michael Turner and Baltimore's Le'Ron McClain, and Portis' 22 rushing first downs in the fourth quarter topped the NFL. For his efforts, Portis was chosen to his second Pro Bowl, his first as a Redskin, and earned Second-Team Associated Press All-Pro honors.

With 121 yards rushing against the Dallas Cowboys in a 26-24 win on Sept. 28, 2008, Portis passed Larry Brown and Hall of Famer John Riggins for most career regular-season 100-yard games in a Redskins uniform. He followed that up with five more 100-plus-yard efforts to extend record to 25. For his career, Portis has topped the century mark in a contest on 43 occasions. His teams are 33-10 in such games, including an 21-4 mark with the Redskins.

LONDON CALLING

Redskins linebacker London Fletcher earned the nickname "Bam Bam" as a child because of his fondness for the Flintstones cartoon and his propensity to ransack his home. In like manner, Fletcher has terrorized opponents for the last 11 seasons as one of the NFL's most consistent and productive defensive players. Fletcher continued that level of play in 2008 as he led the Redskins and tied for sixth in the NFL in tackles. Also, Fletcher has now opened 135 straight league contests, a figure which ranks third among players currently on an NFL roster.

NFL'S IRONMEN

Furthermore, Fletcher has not missed a game since entering the league as a college free agent with St. Louis in 1998. His 176 consecutive games played is tied atop the list of players currently on an NFL roster with Tampa Bay's Ronde Barber and Indianapolis' Peyton Manning.

Since joining the Redskins in 2007, Fletcher has led the team in tackles both seasons, while assuming a leadership and defensive captaincy role. He has been named a Pro Bowl alternate each of the last two years.

Fletcher anchored the St. Louis Rams' defense from his middle linebacker spot in 1999, leading the team in tackles with 138. While St. Louis' offense received much of the attention on the team's way to winning Super Bowl XXXIV, the defense ranked sixth in the league overall and first against the run. Fletcher is one of three Redskins players in 2008, who had been a part of a Super Bowl winner.

Fletcher enjoyed four seasons in St. Louis, leading the Rams in tackles from 1999-2001, before joining Buffalo from 2002-06. He led the Bills in tackles all five seasons and has continued that streak of leading his team in tackles to 10 straight seasons after two years in Washington.

With 145 tackles, 2008 marked the 10th straight season in which Fletcher recorded at least 100 tackles, dating back to 1999 when he was in his second season with the Rams. That is the longest current streak among all NFL players. Among Fletcher's 145 tackles were a team-high six for loss, while he also registered two forced fumbles, one fumble recovery, and nine passes defended.

Among players currently on an NFL roster, Fletcher ranks third with 1,694 career tackles behind only Baltimore's Ray Lewis and Kansas City's Zach Thomas.

In addition to winning the Redskins Defensive MVP Award in each of his first two seasons in Washington, Fletcher has become one of the team's most valuable players in the community.

The Cleveland native has actively participated in many of the team's community and charitable programs, including the "4th & Life" High School Football Forum, has spent time visiting wounded warriors at the Walter Reed Medical Center in Washington, D.C., and serving as the Sports Ambassador for the Children's Inn at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Md. For these efforts, as well as his work in his hometown, Fletcher was named the Washington Redskins 2008 Walter Payton Man of the Year.

COLD PLAY

In 2008, Chris Cooley was second behind Kansas City's Tony Gonzalez among NFL tight ends with a career-high 83 receptions and fourth behind Gonzalez, Dallas' Jason Witten and Houston's Owen Daniels with a career-high 848 receiving yards. He was also fourth behind Gonzalez, Witten and Daniels with 43 first-down receptions.

In addition to making his mark as one of the most productive players at his position in Redskins history, Cooley, who garnered his second straight Pro Bowl selection following 2008, has established himself as one of the NFL's premier tight ends.

His 277 catches and 3,143 receiving yards since entering the league both rank fourth among tight ends over that span, trailing the totals of Gonzalez, Witten and San Diego's Antonio Gates. His 28 touchdowns are tied with Gonzalez for third among tight ends over the last three seasons, behind Gates and Indianapolis' Dallas Clark.

NFL TIGHT ENDS SINCE 2004

Player	Team	Catches	Yards	TDs
Tony Gonzalez	Atlanta	448	5,293	29
Jason Witten	Dallas	394	4,588	24
Antonio Gates	San Diego	376	4,677	49
Chris Cooley	Washington	314	3,457	28

Note: Indianapolis' Dallas Clark is second among tight ends with 30 touchdowns since 2004.

Cooley's 83 catches in 2008 tied him for 11th in the NFL and fourth in the NFC, and broke his own club record for receptions by a tight end. His 849 receiving yards tied Jerry Smith's team record for most among tight ends in Redskins history. Cooley now owns four of the top five single-season reception and receiving yards totals among tight ends in franchise history.

GATHER NO MOSS

With 79 catches for 1,044 yards and six touchdowns in 2008, Redskins wide receiver Santana Moss recorded the third 1,000-yard receiving season of his career. He also accomplished the feat in 2003 as a member of the New York Jets, and in 2005 when he went on to the Pro Bowl. In addition, Moss notched his second 75-catch season, which he first accomplished in 2005.

Moss' receiving yardage total was 14th in the NFL and sixth in the NFC, while his 79 catches were tied for sixth among NFC wide receivers. His six touchdown catches tied for 12th in the conference and 22nd in the league.

With a touchdown in the first three weeks of the season, Moss extended a streak dating back to last season of catching a scoring pass in six consecutive games, including playoffs. It tied a Redskins record held by Hall of Famer Bobby Mitchell, who did it in 1964, and is the second-longest streak of Moss's career behind the seven straight games he did it from Oct. 12-Nov. 23, 2003.

TOP FIVE SINGLE-SEASON RECEIVING SEASONS BY TIGHT ENDS IN REDSKINS HISTORY

Player	Year	Catches	Yards
Chris Cooley	2008	83	849
Jerry Smith	1967	67	849
Chris Cooley	2007	66	786
Chris Cooley	2005	71	774
Chris Cooley	2006	57	734

The 6-foot-3, 250-pound Cooley has started all 16 regular season games in four consecutive seasons. His streak of 64 straight starts is the second-longest among NFL tight ends behind only Chicago's Desmond Clark (67). Cooley has been active in all 80 of the Redskins' contests since joining the team in 2004 and has made a reception in 72 consecutive regular-season games.

Cooley, who is the first tight end in NFL history to catch at least six touchdowns in his first four seasons, has also demonstrated his speed and athletic ability to run with the ball as evidenced by his 1,799 yards after catch (YAC), the most among NFL tight ends since he entered the league in 2004.

MOST YAC AMONG NFL TIGHT ENDS SINCE 2004

Player	Team	YAC
Chris Cooley	Washington	1,799
Jason Witten	Dallas	1,653
Tony Gonzalez	Atlanta	1,652
Antonio Gates	San Diego	1,641
Alge Crumpler	Tennessee	1,270

For his career, Moss owns 430 career receptions for 6,541 receiving yards (15.7) and 43 touchdowns. Since 2003, he ranks 12th in the NFL with 6,068 receiving yards and 19th with 398 receptions.

After just four seasons with the Redskins, Moss is ranked eighth in club history with 279 career receptions, ninth all-time in receiving yards with 4,125, and tied for ninth in club history in receiving touchdowns with 24.

Moss trails Michael Westbrook in franchise career receiving yards by just 155 and with 1,109 yards this season, he could surpass Hugh Taylor and move into seventh place on the all-time list.

He set the club record for single-season receiving yards in 2005 with 1,483 yards on his way to the Pro Bowl.

Moss' 70-catch average during his four seasons with the Redskins is a record for a franchise that has employed Hall of Fame receivers Wayne Millner, Bobby Mitchell, Charley Taylor and Art Monk.

SOUTHERN COMFORT

Last season, Washington Redskins quarterback Jason Campbell, a native of Taylorsville, Miss., continued his progression under Head Coach Jim Zorn, while learning the nuances of the West Coast Offense.

Overall for the season, Campbell completed 319-of-506 pass attempts (62.3%) for 3,245 yards, with 13 touchdowns and six interceptions, for a passer rating of 84.3.

Campbell ranked first in the NFL in interception percentage (1.2) and was the 19th-rated passer in the league. He ranked 10th in attempts, 11th in completions, 15th in completion percentage and 16th in yards.

Campbell also rushed for 258 yards on 47 attempts (5.5 avg.), picking up 15 first downs in the process. His yardage total was the most among NFC quarterbacks and his 11 runs of at least 10 yards were tied for the second-most in the league among quarterbacks behind Ryan Fitzpatrick.

Campbell enters training camp as the Redskins starter for the third straight season hoping to build from his first year in Head Coach Jim Zorn's West Coast Offense. This will mark the first time since he was in high school that Campbell will be a starting quarterback in the same offensive system in two consecutive seasons.

In 2008, Campbell started in a career-high 16 games and was named a team captain. He was one of the league's premier players through the first half of 2008 and finished the season completing 315-of-506 passing attempts (62.3%) for 3,245 passing yards with 13 touchdowns and six interceptions for a passer rating of 84.3.

Campbell's completions (315), passing attempts (506), passing yards (3,245), touchdown passes (13) and passer rating (84.3) were all career highs. Along the way, he set a club record with 271 consecutive passes without an interception (during parts of the 2007 and 2008 seasons), marking the fifth-longest streak in NFL history and the longest since Rich Gannon threw 277 passes without an interception for Oakland in 2000.

Campbell's 315 completions were just one shy of Brad Johnson's club single-season record of 316. His completions percentage of 62.3 was the fifth-best single-season mark in club history.

For his career, Campbell has completed 675-of-1,130 career passing attempts (59.7%) for 7,242 yards with 35 touchdowns and 23 interceptions for a passer rating of 80.4. He enters the season ranked 10th all-time in club history in passing yards (7,242), seventh in passing attempts (1,130), seventh in completions (675), tied for 11th in touchdown passes (35) and second in passer rating (80.4%). In addition, he owns the highest career completion percentage (59.7%) in club history (minimum 1,000 attempts).

WATCHING THE BLIND SIDE

Since Redskins left tackle Chris Samuels entered the league in 2000, the Alabama product has embedded himself as the team's franchise left tackle. The No. 3 overall pick in the 2000 NFL Draft has proven to be a consistent and durable anchor of the Redskins' offensive line.

Before being placed on injured reserve on Dec. 9, 2008, Samuels had started all but one game since the beginning of the 2004 season and has missed only eight contests in his eight-year career.

Since Samuels joined the Redskins' offensive line in 2000, the unit's 306 sacks allowed is the fourth-fewest total in the NFC, behind Green Bay (220), the New York Giants (293) and New Orleans (296).

The 6-foot-5, 317-pound Samuels was selected to sixth Pro Bowl following the 2008 season, including his fourth straight. That total ranks third among current NFL tackles behind only 12-year veterans Walter Jones and Orlando Pace, who have gone nine and seven times, respectively.

MOST PRO BOWL SELECTIONS AMONG ACTIVE NFL TACKLES

Player	Team	Seasons	Pro Bowls

Chris Samuels	Washington	9	6 (2001-02, 05-08)
Flozell Adams	Dallas	11	4 (2003-04, 06-07)

After nine seasons with the Redskins, Samuels is also already one of the most decorated players in franchise annals. Since the AFC-NFC Pro Bowl format was created, coinciding with the merger in 1970, Samuels' six Pro Bowl berths are the third-most in franchise history, behind only Darrell Green and Ken Houston, who each had seven selections (Charley Taylor was selected to four NFL All-Star Games and three Pro Bowls and Len Hauss was selected to three NFL All-Star Games and three Pro Bowls).

THE PREDATOR(s)

In each of the last two seasons, the Redskins have drafted a hard-hitting, ball-hawking safety that has gone on to earn All-Rookie team honors. The manner in which Washington acquired LaRon Landry (2007) and Chris Horton (2008), however, is a great contrast, but both are credits to the Redskins Personnel Department, led by Vice President of Football Operations Vinny Cerrato.

Landry was an All-American and three-time All-SEC performer at LSU who is a blend of size, strength and speed that is the prototype for the position. For that reason the Redskins drafted him with the sixth overall pick in 2007 to play alongside Pro Bowler Sean Taylor in the back end.

Following the tragic, untimely death of Taylor in 2007, Washington was in need of a playmaking safety to pair with Landry. This time, the Redskins found their man near the end of the draft, nabbing Chris Horton in the seventh round in 2008 with the 249th overall selection.

After what the pair has shown in just three combined professional seasons, Washington once again believes it has one of the best safety combinations in the National Football League.

Horton, who goes by the nickname, The Predator, which could equally describe Landry, made a quick impact in his rookie season in 2008 out of UCLA.

Horton was named the NFC Defensive Player of the Week following a week two win over New Orleans when he registered two interceptions and a fumble recovery in his first NFL start.

In that game, he became the first NFL player with two interceptions and a fumble recovery in his first career start since Liffort Hobley on Oct. 11, 1987, the first NFL rookie with two interceptions and a fumble recovery in his first career start since Paul Tripoli on Oct. 4, 1987, the first Redskins player with two interceptions and a fumble recovery in the same game since Anthony Washington on Dec. 4, 1983, and the first Redskins rookie with two interceptions and a fumble recovery in same game since Brig Owens on Nov. 27, 1966.

Horton was also named NFL Defensive Rookie of the Month for September.

Despite missing two contests in 2008, Horton was third on the team with 81 tackles and registered a team-high three interceptions, seven passes defended, one fumble recovery, one forced fumble and six special-teams tackles. He was also tied for second on the team with five tackles for loss.

Following the season, Horton was named to the All-Rookie team, the lowest-drafted player on offense or defense to receive the honor.

Horton, a football junkie, who has an unquenchable thirst for knowledge enters 2009 safely entrenched as a key cog in the Redskins defense looking to make even more of an impact.

Following a 2007 season in which he earned All-Rookie honors, Landry continued his emergence as one of the NFL's best safeties in 2008. After moving to free safety full-time at the start of training camp, Landry recorded 70 tackles, two forced fumbles, one fumble recovery, two interceptions and 13 passes defended.

In his second year from LSU, Landry was voted as the first alternate to the NFC Pro Bowl squad behind Brian Dawkins and Adrian Wilson.

Recognized as one of the rising stars in the National Football League, Landry compiled seven tackles, one pass defended and a half-sack in the regular season opener against the New York Giants. His performance prompted Pro Football Hall of Fame coach John Madden, who was broadcasting the game for NBC in front of a nationally-televised audience, to laud the Redskins' top pick (sixth overall) in the 2007 NFL Draft:

"This guy is going to be a superstar in this league...and before it is all over he is going to be a very special player."

Landry, whose brother Dawan is a safety for the Baltimore Ravens, is perhaps the most athletically gifted player on the team, mixing his chiseled 6-foot, 210-pound frame with superior speed and range.

The pair shores up the back end for what Washington hopes is a dominating front seven and a pair of shut-down cornerbacks.

WORTH IT

The Redskins made the biggest splash, literally and figuratively, in free agency when they signed 6-foot-5, 350-pound defensive tackle Albert Haynesworth. One of the most disruptive and dominant forces in the game, Washington is expecting to reap the rewards of Haynesworth's individual abilities, while he also elevates the performances of his defensive teammates.

Haynesworth spent the first seven years of his National Football League career with the Tennessee Titans, who drafted him No. 15 overall in 2002 out of the University of Tennessee. He joins the Redskins following back-to-back seasons in which he earned first-team All-Pro honors.

In 2008, Haynesworth registered 75 tackles, including seven for loss, 8.5 sacks, 19 quarterback pressures, four forced fumbles, one fumble recovery and one pass defensed. He was fourth in the Associated Press NFL Defensive Player of the Year voting, which followed a third-place finish in 2007. Haynesworth was the only player to finish in the top five the last two years.

The Hartsville, S.C., native has 24 career sacks, with 14.5 of them coming in the last two seasons. That total is the highest among all NFL defensive tackles during this span. His 8.5 sacks last year ranked seventh in the AFC, 15th in the NFL, and was tied for first among the league's interior linemen with Minnesota's Kevin Williams.

For his career, Haynesworth has totaled 454 career tackles, 24.0 sacks, 47 tackles for loss, 12 passes defensed, seven forced fumbles and three fumble recoveries in 90 games (74 starts).

In addition, with Haynesworth anchoring Tennessee's defensive front, in 2007 and 2008, the Titans placed fifth and seventh against the run and seventh and fifth in the NFL sacks, respectively. They allowed an average of 93.1 rushing yards per game over the last two seasons, the fourth-lowest in the league behind Minnesota, Baltimore and Pittsburgh. The Titans' 84 sacks in the past two years are the fifth-most behind the Cowboys, Giants, Steelers and Eagles. Tennessee's 14.6 points per game allowed last season was the second-best mark in the NFL.

KID IN THE HALL

The Redskins acquired cornerback DeAngelo Hall on Nov. 8, 2008 and he immediately paid dividends, collecting two interceptions and a fumble recovery in his first five games with the team.

His first interception came in his Redskins debut, when he picked off Dallas' Tony Romo, and his second came two weeks later against Eli Manning and the Giants. Overall in 2008, Hall tied for sixth in the NFL with five interceptions and was fifth with 21 passes defensed.

Hall re-signed with the Redskins minutes before the start of free agency in February and has found a comfort zone back in his home state of Virginia. The two-time Pro Bowler expects to have the kind of season that will once again place him among the elite cornerbacks in the game.

He totaled 27 tackles (21 solo), two interceptions, eight passes defensed and one fumble recovery with the Redskins.

In his brief stint with the Redskins last season, Hall showed that he still has the playmaking ability that once made him the eighth overall selection in the 2004 draft.

Since entering the league that season, Hall has the fifth-most interceptions (22) in the NFL, behind Ed Reed (31), Champ Bailey (25), Asante Samuel (24) and Rashean Mathis (23). Hall has also shown he knows what to do when he does have the ball in his hands as his 475 interception return yards over that span are the second-most in the league.

2009 WASHINGTON REDSKINS BY POSITION

QUARTERBACKS (4)/RETURNING STARTERS (1)

Quarterback Jason Campbell enters training camp as the Redskins starter for the third straight season hoping to build from his first year in Head Coach Jim Zorn's West Coast Offense. This will mark the first time since he was in high school that Campbell will be a starting quarterback in the same offensive system in two consecutive seasons.

In 2008, Campbell started in a career-high 16 games and was named a team captain. He was one of the league's premier players through the first half of 2008 and finished the season completing 315-of-506 passing attempts (62.3%) for 3,245 passing yards with 13 touchdowns and six interceptions for a passer rating of 84.3.

Campbell's completions (315), passing attempts (506), passing yards (3,245), touchdown passes (13) and passer rating (84.3) were all career highs, while his interception percentage (1.2) was the lowest in the NFL. In fact, Campbell set a club record with 271 consecutive passes without an interception (during parts of the 2007 and 2008 seasons), marking the fifth-longest streak in NFL history and the longest since Rich Gannon threw 277 passes without an interception for Oakland in 2000.

Campbell's 315 completions were just one shy of Brad Johnson's club single-season record of 316. His completions percentage of 62.3 was the fifth-best single-season mark in club history.

In addition to leading the team with his arm, Campbell finished second on the club with 258 rushing yards, which was fifth among NFL quarterbacks and led all NFC signal callers.

For his career, Campbell has completed 675-of-1,130 career passing attempts (59.7%) for 7,242 yards with 35 touchdowns and 23 interceptions for a passer rating of 80.4. He enters the season ranked 10th all-time in club history in passing yards (7,242), seventh in passing attempts (1,130), seventh in completions (675), tied for 11th in touchdown passes (35) and second in passer rating (80.4%). In addition, he owns the highest career completion percentage (59.7%) in club history (minimum 1,000 attempts).

Backing up Campbell, will be steady veteran Todd Collins and young gunslinger Colt Brennan. Neither took a snap last season, but Collins, entering his 15th season, has proven his value as one of the NFL's best backup quarterbacks many times over his career. The most recent example was when Collins stepped in for an injured Campbell at the end of the 2007 season and led Washington to four straight victories and a playoff berth.

Brennan, one of the most decorated and prolific passers in college football history, opened eyes as a rookie during preseason last year. The Hawaii product completed 36-of-53 passing attempts (68.0%) for 411 yards with three touchdowns and zero interceptions, while leading the team to a pair of fourth-quarter comeback victories.

College Free Agent Chase Daniel, an All-American and Heisman Trophy finalist at Missouri, opens training camp as the fourth quarterback.

RUNNING BACKS (8)/RETURNING STARTERS (2)

Clinton Portis, who earned All-Pro and Pro Bowl honors last season, leads a stable of proven, experienced running backs. Entering his eighth season, Portis has already amassed 9,202 career rushing yards on 2,052 carries (4.5 avg.) with 72 rushing touchdowns and 233 career receptions for 1,906 yards (8.2 avg.) and four touchdowns.

With his 1,487 rushing yards last season, which ranked fourth in the NFL, Portis became the 28th man in NFL history to top the 9,000-yard mark. Among players currently on an NFL roster, Portis ranks fourth in career rushing yards (9,202), fourth in career rushing attempts (2,052), second in career rushing touchdowns (72) and second in rushing yards per game (92.0).

Portis is one of eight players in NFL history to rush for at least 1,250 yards in a season six times, joining Walter Payton (9), Barry Sanders (9), Jim Brown (7), Emmitt Smith (7), Eric Dickerson (6), Curtis Martin (6) and LaDainian Tomlinson (6). Portis, Sanders, Dickerson and Tomlinson are the only players to reach 1,250 rushing yards six times in their first seven seasons.

In addition, Portis has averaged 111.1 yards from scrimmage per game in his career, making him one of five players in NFL history, along with Jim Brown (125.5), LaDainian Tomlinson (122.5), Barry Sanders (118.9) and Walter Payton (111.9), to average more than 110.0 yards from scrimmage per game.

As a Redskin, Portis ranks second all-time in club history in rushing yards (6,103), third in rushing attempts (1,489), third in rushing touchdowns (43) and 10th in total touchdowns (45). He owns a franchise record with 25 career 100-yard rushing games.

Fellow eight-year veteran Ladell Betts will serve as Portis' primary backup. In 93 career games, with 11 starts, Betts has totaled 2,966 rushing yards on 720 carries (4.1 avg.) and 11 touchdowns, as well as 148 career receptions for 1,326 yards (9.0 avg.) and three touchdowns.

Filling in for an injured Portis in 2006, Betts amassed career highs in rushing yards (1,154), rushing attempts (245), receptions (53) and total touchdowns (5).

Rock Cartwright, also in his eighth season, adds depth to the backfield and is expected to resume his role as the team's primary kickoff returner. Since entering the role in 2006, Cartwright has totaled 4,464 yards on 183 kickoff returns (24.4 avg.), which both rank second in club annals, trailing only NFL-record holder Brian Mitchell.

Marcus Mason, who led the entire NFL in preseason rushing yards a year ago, will be vying for a roster spot.

Anthony Alridge and Dominique Dorsey, a pair of young speedsters, will look to impress in the backfield and as kick returners in the preseason.

Bruising fullback Mike Sellers earned his first Pro Bowl selection in his ninth NFL season in 2008. In his career, Sellers has appeared in 130 games with 47 starts at fullback, H-back and at tight end. He has blocked for a 1,000-yard rusher in a single-season in seven of his eight seasons with the Redskins (Stephen Davis in 1999 and 2000, Clinton Por-tis in 2004-05 and 2007-08 and Ladell Betts in 2006). Sellers is also a threat with the ball in his hands as he has totaled 85 career receptions for 680 yards (8.0 avg.) and 16 touchdowns, as well as 156 career yards rushing on 46 carries (3.4 avg.) with three touchdowns.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS

Seventh-round draft pick Eddie Williams, who starred as a pass-catcher at Idaho, adds excellent potential to the full-back position.

WIDE RECEIVERS (9)/RETURNING STARTERS (2)

The explosive Santana Moss will once again lead the receiving corps. In 2008, Moss started in all 16 regular season games, finishing second on the Redskins in receptions (79) and leading the team in receiving yards (1,044) and touchdown receptions (6). It was the third 1,000-yard receiving season of his career and the total ranked eighth in the NFC and 14th in the NFL.

For his career, Moss has played in 111 career games with 89 starts and owns 430 career receptions for 6,541 receiving yards (15.7) and 43 touchdowns. After just four seasons with the Redskins, he is ranked eighth in club history with 279 career receptions, ninth in receiving yards with 4,125, and tied for ninth (Michael Westbrook) in receiving touchdowns with 24. In 2005, Moss set the club record for receiving yards in a single season with 1,483 yards. His 70-catch average during his four seasons with the club is a record for a franchise that has employed Hall of Fame receivers Wayne Millner, Bobby Mitchell, Charley Taylor and Art Monk.

Complementing Moss is the versatile Antwaan Randle El, who last year started all 16 games, finishing second on the team in receiving touchdowns (4) and third on the team in receptions (53) and receiving yards (593). His receptions and receiving touchdown totals were career highs. In addition, Randle El tossed a touchdown pass, which was the fourth in the regular season in his seven seasons. For his career, Randle El has completed 20-of-25 passing attempts (80.0%) for 281 yards and four touchdowns for a 153.1 passer rating, making him the highest-rated passer in NFL history among players who have at least 12 attempts. Randle El also served as the team's primary punt returner in 2008, registering 39 returns for 254 yards (6.5 avg.).

Second-year receivers Malcolm Kelly and Devin Thomas will look to add a spark to the Redskins offense. After being hampered by a hamstring injury in training camp a year ago, Thomas emerged and saw significant time as the season progressed. He finished with 15 receptions for 120 yards, while also rushing three times for 53 yards, including a 29-yard touchdown run.

Kelly, an imposing target at 6-foot-4, 227 pounds, will look to bounce back from a knee injury that limited him for most of 2008.

Newcomers Keith Eloi, Marques Hagans (Practice Squad 2008), Trent Shelton, D.J. Hackett, and seventh-round draft pick Marko Mitchell will provide a mix of experience and youth to a competition for roster spots.

TIGHT ENDS (4)/RETURNING STARTERS (1)

Chris Cooley, fresh off two consecutive Pro Bowl nods, has been one of the league's premier tight ends since entering the NFL in 2004. Since that season, among tight ends, he ranks fourth in receptions (314), fourth in receiving yards (3,457) and fourth in receiving touchdowns (28).

Cooley has not missed a game in five NFL seasons, appearing in 80 career contests with 73 starts, including 64 in a row. He has caught a pass in 72 consecutive games. He owns four of the top five receiving seasons by a tight end in club history (83 receptions in 2008, 71 in 2005, 66 in 2007 and 57 in 2006) and enters the season ranked second in Redskins history in receptions by a tight end (314), second in receiving yards by a tight end (3,457) and second in touchdowns by a tight end (28).

Todd Yoder, entering his 10th NFL season serves as a valuable blocking tight end. Yoder has also demonstrated soft hands, catching eight passes for 50 yards and a touchdown in 2008.

The talented Fred Davis will look to make strides in his second year after being a second-round draft choice in 2008. The 6-foot-4, 257-pound Davis was the John Mackey Award winner, given annually to the nation's best tight end, as a senior at Southern California in 2007.

College Free Agent Robbie Agnone rounds out the foursome and has impressed in the early stages of training camp.

OFFENSIVE LINEMEN (14)/RETURNING STARTERS (4)

Six-time Pro Bowler Chris Samuels returns to anchor the offensive line from his left tackle spot. The longest-tenured Redskin has started 136 regular season games and three postseason contests for Washington. His six Pro Bowl berths, including four in a row, are the third-most in franchise history, trailing only Ken Houston and Darrell Green (7). His six selections also make him third among active tackles, trailing only Seattle's Walter Jones (9) and Chicago's Orlando Pace (7).

Samuels will be reunited this season on the left side by good friend Derrick Dockery, who returns from a two-year hiatus in Buffalo, where he helped Bills running back Marshawn Lynch to two consecutive 1,000-yard rushing seasons. Dockery has played in 96 consecutive games, with 93 consecutive starts, which rank fourth and fifth, respectively, among NFL guards.

Center Casey Rabach returns to the middle to lead the unit for the fifth consecutive season. Rabach has appeared in 105 regular season contests with 86 starts, including 63 of the last 64 games for the Redskins (missed game with an injured groin vs. Arizona, 10/21/07).

Right guard Randy Thomas started all 16 games last season and was named a Pro Bowl alternate. Entering his 11th NFL season, Thomas has started in 141 career games. He has blocked for three different running backs to rush for more than 1,000 yards in a single season in nine of his 11 NFL seasons (Curtis Martin, New York Jets, 1999-02; Clinton Portis, Washington, 2004-05 and 2007-2008; Ladell Betts, Washington, 2006).

There will be an open competition for the right tackle spot during training camp with Stephon Heyer leading the way. Heyer, who made the team as an undrafted free agent in 2007, has provided key depth for the Redskins the last two seasons, making 12 starts (eight at right tackle, four at left tackle).

Veterans Jeremy Bridges and Mike Williams will be in the mix. Bridges has started 39 games in five NFL seasons. Williams, a former No. 4 overall draft pick, is hoping to resurrect his football career after shedding more than 100 pounds since February.

Guard/tackle Chad Rinehart, a third-round pick in 2008, has impressed coaches with his growth and development since the end of last season and will provide depth to the unit. Tackle Devin Clark, guard/center Will Montgomery, guard Rueben Riley, and tackle D'Anthony Batiste all spent parts of 2008 on the Redskins active roster and/or practice squad. Montgomery has been impressive early in training camp as a backup center who also has the ability to play guard. College Free Agents T Scott Burley and C Edwin Williams, both from Maryland, will challenge for roster spots.

DEFENSIVE LINE (14)/STARTERS RETURNING (2)

The Redskins started the 2009 offseason by adding one of the most dominant defensive players in the NFL when they signed two-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle Albert Haynesworth. In seven seasons in Tennessee, Haynesworth totaled 454 tackles, 24 sacks, 47 tackles for loss, 12 passes defensed, seven forced fumbles and three fumble recoveries. Haynesworth is coming off a 2008 season in which he posted a career-high 8.5 sacks and finished in the top five of the Associated Press NFL Defensive Player of the Year balloting for the second consecutive season.

Haynesworth will team with veteran defensive tackle Cornelius Griffin to form a stout tandem up the middle. Griffin, who has been with the Redskins since 2004, enters the season with 504 tackles, 27 sacks, two interceptions and 23 passes defensed. Last season, while serving as a team captain, Griffin totaled 35 tackles, including two for a loss, one sack and one interception.

At right end, Andre Carter returns for his fourth season in Washington after spending the first five of his career with the 49ers. In 2008, Carter led the Redskins with four sacks and helped the unit finish fourth in the NFL in overall defense (288.8 ypg) and eighth in the league in rushing yards allowed (95.4 ypg). Carter has led all Redskins defensive linemen in tackles for the previous three seasons (72 in 2006, 67 in 2007 and 51 in 2008).

On the other side of the line, veteran Phillip Daniels returns after missing the entire 2008 season with a torn ACL. Daniels, who is a competitive power lifter, has amassed 569 tackles (364 solo), 59 sacks, 16 forced fumbles, 12 fumble recoveries and one interception in his 13 seasons in the league.

To add depth on the defensive line, the Redskins brought back Renaldo Wynn, who was last played for Washington in 2006. Wynn spent the last two seasons with the Saints and Giants, respectively, and enters his 13th year in the NFL with 518 tackles (282), 27 sacks, three passes defensed, six forced fumbles and five fumble recoveries.

Also expected to see significant playing time this season is the versatile Lorenzo Alexander. The do-everything Alexander will rotate at defensive tackle, defensive end and special teams. Alexander posted career highs last season in tackles (26), sacks (2) and passes defensed (2).

Joining Alexander in reserve roles are defensive tackles

Kedric Golston and Anthony Montgomery, both former starters. The two enter their fourth season in Washington and will provide depth up the middle and compete for playing time in the rotation.

The final offseason addition to the Redskins roster came right before training camp as the team added defensive end Jeremy Jarmon. The Redskins selected the Kentucky stand-out in the third round of the 2009 NFL Supplemental Draft. Jarmon started 31-of-39 career games at the University of Kentucky, finishing third in school history with 17.5 career sacks. Following his sophomore season in 2007, Jarmon earned All-Southeastern Conference second-team honors from the league's coaches and was a first-team selection by Rivals.com.

Rounding out the unit are a group of youngsters - end Alex Buzbee, tackle Antonio Dixon, end Rob Jackson, tackle Michael Marquardt and lineman J.D. Skolnitsky - who will battle during the preseason for a chance to make the 53-man roster.

LINEBACKERS (10)/RETURNING STARTERS (2)

The linebacker unit is led by defensive captain London Fletcher, one of the league's most reliable and productive players. Fletcher, who started all 16 games in 2008, led the team in tackles with 146 (95 solo) and tied for second on the team with two forced fumbles. He added nine passes defensed, one fumble recovery and a half-sack on his way to being named a Pro Bowl alternate.

Fletcher has never missed a contest in his previous 11 seasons, playing in 176 consecutive games, which is tied with Indianapolis' Peyton Manning for the longest consecutive streak among active players, excluding specialists, who are currently on an NFL roster.

Fletcher has made 160 career starts, including 135 in a row, which trails only Manning (176) and Tampa Bay's Ronde Barber (151).

For his career, Fletcher has totaled 1,695 tackles (1,110 solo), 14 interceptions, two touchdowns, 28 sacks, 13 forced fumbles and nine fumble recoveries. He has led his team in tackles for 10 consecutive seasons (1999-2008), topping the 100-tackle plateau each time.

Fletcher's 1,244 tackles this decade (according to STATS, Inc.) are the most in the NFL, topping Zach Thomas, Donnie Edwards, Brian Urlacher, Derrick Brooks and Ray Lewis, respectively.

Starting alongside Fletcher for the third straight year will be Rocky McIntosh. After returning from a torn ACL, which prematurely ended his 2007 season, McIntosh played in 16 games last season, with a career-high 15 starts. He finished second on the team with 104 tackles, tied for second in forced fumbles (2) and fourth in sacks (2).

The Redskins first-round draft pick (No. 13 overall) Brian Orakpo will be looked upon to fill the strongside linebacker role, while also being used as a pass-rush specialist. Orakpo wrapped up his stellar collegiate career at Texas in 2008 by winning the Nagurski Trophy (nation's top defensive player), Lombardi Award (nation's top lineman) and Hendricks Award (nation's top defensive end). He was a unanimous first-team All-America selection by the American Football Coaches Association, Associated Press, Football Writers Association of America, Sporting News and Walter Camp Football Foundation, as well as the consensus Big 12 Defensive Player of the Year and a unanimous first-team All-Big 12 selection.

Similar to Orakpo, third-year player Chris Wilson will move from his defensive end spot to add depth at linebacker while also seeing action as a situation pass-rusher with his hand in the dirt.

H.B. Blades, who has played in 32 games during his first two seasons, with five starts, will serve as a valuable reserve at all three linebacker positions.

Draft picks Cody Glenn (fifth round) and Robert Henson (sixth round) will fight for playing time while also being looked to as key special teams contributors. Veterans Alfred Fincher, who played in 15 games for the Redskins last season, and Robert Thomas, as well as college free agent Darrel Young, will battle for roster spots.

DEFENSIVE BACKS (13)/RETURNING STARTERS (4)

The Redskins return one of the NFL's most talented secondaries, which features cornerbacks DeAngelo Hall and Carlos Rogers and safeties Chris Horton and LaRon Landry. Hall, a two-time Pro Bowl selection, joined the Redskins midway through the 2008 season and immediately paid dividends, totaling 27 tackles (21 solo), two interceptions, eight passes defended and one fumble recovery in seven games.

In a combined 15 games spent with the Raiders and Redskins last season, Hall tied for sixth in the NFL with five interceptions and was fifth with 21 passes defended. His interception total (10) over the last two seasons is tied for fifth in the NFL.

In 2008, Rogers, a first-round pick in 2005 (No. 9 overall), returned from an ACL tear that ended his 2007 season after just seven games and anchored the league's seventh-ranked pass defense. He registered 53 tackles, a team-best 32 passes defended, two interceptions and one fumble recovery. His passes defended total tied for the NFL lead (according to NFL GSIS).

Horton, a seventh-round selection in 2008, exploded onto the scene early last season and ended the year by being named to the All-Rookie Team - the lowest drafted player on the offensive or defensive team to be selected. He was named NFL Defensive Rookie of the Month for September and earned NFC Defensive Player of the Week honors in his first career start against New Orleans (9/14). In that contest, he became the first NFL player since Liffort Hobley on October 11, 1987 to record two interceptions and a fumble recovery in his first career start (vs. New Orleans, 9/14). He later became the first rookie to record four takeaways in his first four games since San Diego's Andre Young did so in 1982.

Horton's three interceptions led the team and were the most by a Redskins rookie in a single season since the late Sean Taylor posted four interceptions in 2004.

Landry, the No. 6 overall pick in the 2007 NFL Draft, is a rare combination of size and speed, who continued his emergence as one of the NFL's best safeties in 2008. He was selected as a Pro Bowl first alternate after being named a third alternate as a rookie in 2007. Landry has started all 32 career games and last season finished with 70 tackles and was second on the team with two interceptions and 11 passes defended.

Fred Smoot, entering his ninth NFL season, provides an experienced cornerback, who will see plenty of action. Smoot has played in 114 career games with 98 starts, and has tallied 432 career tackles (361 solo), 21 interceptions, five forced fumbles and three fumble recoveries. Last season, Smoot played in all 16 regular season games with nine starts, registering 58 tackles, one interception and seven passes defended.

A pair of young cornerbacks, Justin Tryon (fourth-round pick in 2008) and Kevin Barnes (third-round pick in 2009), have coaches excited with their potential and showed much growth this past offseason.

Safety Reed Doughty entered 2008 as a starting safety before illness and injury derailed his season after playing in only four games. He will battle for significant playing time in 2009, while also being looked upon as a special teams leader.

Safety Kareem Moore played in 14 games with one start as a rookie last season and showed tremendous growth and potential as the year progressed. Like Doughty, Moore will challenge for playing time in the defensive backfield, while also playing a vital role on special teams, where he registered 21 tackles last season.

Cornerbacks Michael Grant and Byron Westbrook were both members of the Redskins practice squad in 2008. College free agents CB Doug Dutch and S Lendy Holmes will also have an opportunity to impress during the preseason.

SPECIALISTS (4)/RETURNING STARTERS (2)

Kicker Shaun Suisham returns for his third training camp with the Redskins. For his career, Suisham has connected on 67-of-86 field goal attempts (77.9%) and 76-of-77 extra point attempts for 277 points with Washington and Dallas. He is the all-time leader in Redskins' history in field goal percentage (78.8%), connecting on 63-of-80 field goals (minimum 40 attempts). His 63 field goals are the most in club history.

Suisham will have competition in the preseason in the form of Dave Rayner, who has seen action in 43 regular season games for five different teams over the last four seasons (2005-08).

Veteran punter Hunter Smith joins the Redskins after 10 successful seasons in Indianapolis. Smith will be looked upon to significantly bolster a punting game which struggled in 2008. For his career, Smith has played in 160 games and totaled 577 punts for 25,038 yards (43.4 avg.), and a net average of 35.2 yards.

Long snapper Ethan Albright, a Pro Bowl selection following the 2007 season, enters his 15th NFL season looking to remain one of the league's most consistent players at his position. Albright has appeared in all 16 regular season games for the past 13 seasons (208 contests) with Buffalo, 1996-2000, and Washington, 2001-2008.

Rock Cartwright and Antwaan Randle El, the primary kickoff and punt returners, respectively, in 2008, both return. Others who could possibly see opportunities as returners include Anthony Alridge, Ladell Betts, Dominique Dorsey, DeAngelo Hall, Santana Moss and Devin Thomas.

SKINFORMATION/2008 IN REVIEW

BALL SECURITY

It is no secret that perhaps the biggest factor in winning NFL games is holding onto the football. The Redskins demonstrated this early on last season during their 4-1 start.

After becoming the first team in NFL history to play its first five games without an offensive turnover, the Redskins registered just 18 (12 fumbles lost, six interceptions) in 2008. This total was the fifth-lowest in the NFL behind Miami (13), the Giants (13), Indianapolis (17) and Tennessee (17). Washington's interception rate of 1.18 percent was the best mark in the NFL.

Prior to throwing two interceptions in week nine against Pittsburgh, the Redskins had not thrown an interception in 12 straight contests, dating back to the 2007 season, which is an NFL record. Likewise, the Redskins' streak of 379 pass attempts without an interception, which also dated back to the 2007 season, shattered the previous NFL record of 281 by Oakland in 2001.

Players who threw a pass during this streak are:

Jason Campbell - 271

Todd Collins - 105

Antwaan Randle El - 2

Clinton Portis - 1

Campbell's 271 pass attempts without an interception is a franchise record and the fifth-longest streak in NFL history.

MOST CONSECUTIVE PASS ATTEMPTS WITHOUT AN INTERCEPTION IN NFL HISTORY:

	PLAYER	PASSES	YEAR(s)
1.	Bernie Kosar	308	1990-91
2.	Bart Starr	294	1964-65
3.	Jeff George	279	1993-94
4.	Rich Gannon	277	2001
5.	Jason Campbell	271	2007-08

Last season, the Redskins held a 31:31-28:29 time of possession advantage over their opponents. This margin ranked second in the NFC, behind the Giants, and fifth in the NFL. The Redskins were 7-2 when they had the ball longer than their opponents and 1-6 when they did not. During a four-game winning streak from weeks two-five, Washington held the ball for a combined 40:26 longer than its opponents. In similar fashion, Washington held a 35:45-24:15 advantage in a win at Detroit in week eight and a 38:27-21:33 edge in a week 12 victory at Seattle.

REDSKINS ARE POSSESSIVE

Over the past two seasons the NFC East became the first division in NFL history to not have a team with a losing record. It was also the first division since the AFC East in 1999 and 2000 to have four teams win at least eight games in back-to-back years.

THE BEASTLY EAST

The four members of the NFC East combined for a 38-25-1 record in 2008. Their cumulative record was the second-best among the NFL's eight divisions, behind the NFC South (40-24).

Additionally, the NFC East and NFC South were the only divisions to have all four of their teams with at least a .500 record. The NFC East consisted of four of the top eight defenses in the NFL, while having three of the top 13 offenses in the league.

The Washington defense, ranked second in the NFC and fourth in the NFL in 2008, held 12 of its 16 opponents below their season average for total yards per game. It accomplished this feat in five of six games against the four top-10 offenses it faced (New Orleans, Arizona, Giants, Philadelphia-twice).

The Redskins, Cowboys and Giants were the only NFL teams

to face all four conference championship game participants (Arizona, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh) in the regular season. In their five games against those teams (Philadelphia twice), the Redskins held their opponent under its season average for total yards per game each time.

The unit also held 10 of its 16 opponents to 200 or less passing yards, including New Orleans, Arizona and Philadelphia, which ranked first, second and sixth in the league, respectively, in passing yards. In fact, in back-to-back weeks, the Redskins held the league's two most potent passing attacks, New Orleans and Arizona to 195 and 197 net passing yards, respectively. These numbers were a combined 211.2 yards below those two teams' season averages.

The Redskins defense allowed only one opponent to pass for 300 yards (Dallas, 9/28), in a game Washington was victorious. Only two teams (Giants, 11/30) mustered more than 240 passing yards against the Redskins defense.

Washington ranked third in the NFC and sixth in the NFL in points allowed per game (18.5), behind Pittsburgh, Tennessee, Baltimore, Philadelphia and the Giants.

The Redskins' four return touchdowns allowed were tied for 11th-most in the NFL as two came via the punt, while two came off fumble recoveries. The defense itself allowed only 268 points in the 16 games, or 16.75 points per contest. The Redskins were the only team in the league to go the first 15 games without surrendering 25 points in a game. They came one game short of becoming the first team in the NFL since the 2001 Eagles to go an entire season without allowing 25 points in a game. Additionally, Washington's defense only allowed 75 points in the fourth quarter last season, an average of 4.75 a game, tied for the sixth-lowest total in the NFL.

Greg Blache's unit was remarkable at getting off the field. It forced opposing offenses into three-and-out situations on 56 of 176 possessions, 31.8 percent of the time, which was the best mark in the entire league, ahead of Baltimore, New England, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

Prior to a game against Dallas in week 11, the Redskins defense held each of its previous five opponents to less than 275 yards of total offense, the first time it had done this since games 9-13 of 1989. It was also tied for the longest such streak in the NFL in 2008, along with Philadelphia, which did it in weeks 12-16.

SMITH'S SWITCH

In addition to being the name of a road within a long snap of Redskins Park in Loudoun County, Virginia, Smith's Switch could also describe Special Teams Coordinator Danny Smith's ability to change field position.

Since Smith joined the Redskins in 2004, the team has given up only 20.5 yards per kickoff return, the second-best mark in the league over that span. It has been nearly as successful on its own kickoff returns, ranking seventh in the league over that span with a 23.2-yard average.

Washington's kickoff unit was among the league's top groups in 2008. The Redskins kickoff team allowed opponents an average starting field position of the 25.7-yard line, the sixth-best mark in the league. The Redskins kickoff return team also ranked sixth in the NFL by averaging a starting field position of the 29.0-yard line. Washington was the only team in the league to place in the top six in both categories.

The addition of veteran punter Hunter Smith is expected to bolster the team's punting unit, while Smith has said this training camp that, in addition to regular punt returner Antwaan Randle El, the explosive DeAngelo Hall and Santana Moss could see more opportunities at the position.

RUNNETH OVER

Washington's 130.9 rushing yards per game ranked eighth in the NFL in 2008. Running back Clinton Portis finished fourth in the league with 1,487 rushing yards, trailing only the Vikings' Adrian Peterson, the Falcons' Michael Turner and the Panthers' DeAngelo Williams.

Four-fifths of the offensive line returns in the form of Pro Bowl left tackle Chris Samuels, center Casey Rabach, right guard Randy Thomas and right tackle Stephon Heyer. Free agent guard Derrick Dockery will replace Pete Kendall. The unit also expects more depth this year with the development of guard Chad Rinehart, a third-round pick in 2008, veteran Jeremy Bridges and the emergence of guard/center Will Montgomery.

Portis and backup Ladell Betts will also reap the benefits of the excellent lead blocking provided by fullback Mike Sellers. Sellers garnered his first Pro Bowl selection following the 2008 season.

Portis was a major factor in closing games for Washington in 2008 as his 22 fourth-quarter rushing first downs were a league high, four more than any other NFC player (Peterson). Portis' 378 fourth-quarter rushing yards were second-most in the NFC and fourth in the league behind Houston's Steve Slaton (464), Atlanta's Michael Turner (389) and Baltimore's Le'Ron McClain (388).

On the other side of the ledger, the Redskins rush defense also ranked eighth in the league. In 11 of its 16 games in 2008, the Washington defense played against a starting running back who had been to the Pro Bowl. In every one of those contests the unit held the Pro Bowler to less than 100 yards rushing. In fact, from weeks 4-11, the Redskins faced Pro Bowl running backs Marion Barber (twice), Brian Westbrook, Steven Jackson, Jamal Lewis, Rudi Johnson and Willie Parker. The six combined for just 430 rushing yards (61.4 ypg) and a 3.77-yards per carry average on 114 attempts.

In week 13 against the Giants, who possessed the league's No. 1 rushing attack, Washington held New York to 108 yards on 35 attempts for a 3.1-yards per carry average. In week 14 against Baltimore, which ranked fourth in the league in rushing in 2008, the Redskins held the Ravens to 3.8 yards per carry. In week 16 against Philadelphia, Washington held Brian Westbrook to 45 rushing yards.

SPREAD THE WEALTH

With Chris Cooley (11th) and Santana Moss (18th), the Redskins were one of four teams in 2008, along with Arizona, Denver and Kansas City, to have two of the top-18 pass catchers in the NFL.

ACceLerated RECOVERY

In 2008, third-year linebacker Rocky McIntosh finished second on the club with 104 tackles and tied for fourth with two sacks. He also registered two forced fumbles, one interception and seven passes defended. The two fumbles were forced in the first quarter of Washington victories over New Orleans and Arizona and resulted in field goals that extended Redskins leads.

Cornerback Carlos Rogers had a club-high 32 passes defended, including two interceptions. According to NFL GSIS, Rogers tied for the NFL lead in passes defended.

Both McIntosh and Rogers returned from torn anterior cruciate ligaments injuries that ended their 2007 seasons and were major reasons for the Redskins' defensive success in 2008.

Fully recovered from their knee injuries, McIntosh and Rogers are poised to provide huge dividends for Washington as they enter the prime of their careers.

Against Arizona last season, Rogers recovered an Edgerrin James fumble caused by McIntosh, which set up a Shaun Suisham field goal. In the second half, Rogers intercepted a Kurt Warner pass and returned it 42 yards to the Arizona 15-yard line to set up the Redskins' game-winning touchdown.

In week 11 against Dallas, the duo reversed roles. With the Cowboys driving, at the Redskins' 27-yard line, quarterback Tony Romo threw a pass into the chest of wide receiver Terrell Owens, but the ball was knocked in the air as a result of a hit by Rogers and was intercepted by McIntosh.

Rogers was the leader of Washington's resurgent pass defense which steadily climbed the charts to a No. 7 ranking in the league. The unit also held 10 of its 16 opponents to 200 or less passing yards, including New Orleans, Arizona and Philadelphia, which ranked first, second and sixth in the league, respectively, in passing yards. In fact, in back-to-back weeks, the Redskins held the league's two most potent passing attacks, New Orleans and Arizona to 195 and 197 net passing yards, respectively. These numbers were a combined 211.2 yards below those two teams' season averages.

In the Redskins' fourth through 10th games, with fellow cornerback Shawn Springs battling a calf injury, Rogers was charged with checking seven-time Pro Bowl wide receiver Torry Holt, dynamic rookie DeSean Jackson - 10th in the NFC with 775 receiving yards - Browns Pro Bowl wide receiver Braylon Edwards, the Lions' Calvin Johnson - fifth in the NFL with 1,165 receiving yards - four-time Pro Bowler Hines Ward and six-time Pro Bowler Terrell Owens. Combined against Rogers and the Redskins, the six accounted for 22 catches for 223 yards and one receiving touchdown or an average of 3.7 catches for 37.2 yards a game. In fact, over an eight-game span from weeks 3-11 Rogers and the Redskins defense limited Ward, Johnson, Holt, Jackson, Edwards, Owens (twice) and Anquan Boldin to a total of 32 catches for 319 yards, for an average of four catches for 39.9 yards.

In week 12 against Seattle, the Redskins secondary, consisting of Rogers, DeAngelo Hall, Fred Smoot, LaRon Landry and Chris Horton, limited the Seahawks to 89 net passing yards and came up with two interceptions.

In week 15 against Cincinnati, the group held Pro Bowl wide receivers T.J. Houshmandzadeh and Chad Ochocinco to a combined six catches for 52 yards.

THE OPPONENT

The Baltimore Ravens enter this week's contest riding a wave of confidence following a trip to the 2008 AFC Championship game. Finishing the regular season with an 11-5 record, head coach John Harbaugh and quarterback Joe Flacco look to continue the success they had in their rookie seasons.

Flacco finished the campaign completing 60 percent of his passes for 2,971 passing yards, and 14 touchdowns. The team's first-round pick became only the third rookie quarterback in NFL History to win a debut playoff game, defeating the Miami Dolphins 27-9 in the first round. The Ravens offensive prowess, however, lies with Le'Ron McClain and the running attack.

McClain emerged as the Ravens most reliable rusher finishing the season with 902 yards and 10 touchdowns on his way to the Pro Bowl. Willis McGahee, added 671 rushing yards and seven touchdowns. Baltimore expects second-year player Ray Rice to be a major contributor as well this season.

Leading the receiving corps is 13-year veteran Derrick Mason, who finished last season with 80 receptions for 1,037 yards and five touchdowns. The 35-year old served as Flacco's primary target last season, with Mark Clayton acting as the next leading receiver hauling in 41 receptions, 695 yards, and three touchdowns.

Despite their recent offensive success, it is their hard-nosed, gang-tackling defense that defines the Ravens. Perennially ranked as one of the top units in the NFL, the Ravens finished this last season with the second-rated defense in the league.

Led by past NFL Defensive Players of the Year Ray Lewis and Ed Reed, the team recorded a league-best 26 interceptions in 2008, returning five for touchdowns. Reed further solidified himself as one of the league's best safeties, tying a career-high nine interceptions last year, while Lewis was voted to his third straight Pro Bowl and the 10th of his career. Joining the pair in Hawaii were defensive tackle Haloti Ngata and linebacker Terrell Suggs.
