The old guard among Harvard's sons, who frowned on commercialized athletics was given quite a shock when Edward L. Casey, one of the Crimson's most illustrious graduates, signed to manage the Redskins for 1935.

Eddie is the first Harvard man to enter the National Football League, but he sees no reason for arched eyebrows. He believes that the pro game is as commendable a field for a college alumnus as selling bonds and sees no reason why he should not contribute his talents in this direction.

A soft spoken, smiling fellow, Eddie Casey, nevertheless, can be a man of iron when necessary. He was a rip-roaring, smashing football player in his prime and he left behind him at Harvard a name which will not soon be forgotten. He was one of the headliners of the Crimson teams of 1916 and 1919. War service prevented his playing in the intervening years, during which he was on the All-Service team in 1917.

He blossomed out into the field of coaching football in 1920, when he directed the playing destinies of Mount Union College at Alliance, Ohio. Two years later he returned to his native heath to coach the Tufts eleven and for four years he fashioned the best teams in Tufts history.

Similar startling success attended his tutoring of the Harvard freshmen teams in 1926, 1927, and 1928. During 1929 and 1930 he was backfield mentor of the Crimson, from which post he stepped up to be head coach of his Alma Mater's major team.

Harvard's gridiron contenders in the four years from 1931 through 1934 were noted for expert coaching, but owing to the congenital lack of man material, these teams were not listed among the greats of the game.

Casey holds a warm spot in the hearts of his players, who take readily to his methods and go through their paces with considerable pep and enthusiasm while Eddie is holding the reins.

Edward L. Casey is a man of many interests, although he doesn't let his outside connections interfere with his coaching plans. He is a highly successful business man and recently was honored with the appointment as Youth Administrator for Massachusetts.

He is a happily married man, with a growing family, and makes his home in Winthrop, Mass.

THE BOSTON REDSKINS
Player Histories - 1935

BARBER, James (Jim) -- Young giant from University of San Francisco, towering six feet, three inches into ozone and moving the weights at 205 pounds. A tackel and a high class one. Coached by Lawrence (Spud) Lewis, formerly of Northwestern. Born in Nashville, Tenn., July 21, 1912, but now hangs his hat in Mantica, California, in offseason. Sure death to opposing ball carriers and stonewall on defense. Is expected to go places in National League this year. Also classy performer on basketball court.

BATTLES, Clifford Franklyn -- A rampaging, untamed mustang when he breaks loose for one of his gallops. Rated as best ball carrier in the National League. Won All-American pro rating for past two seasons. Three years with Redskins and established as darling of Boston fans, because of his brilliant playing. Set new all time ground gaining record in 1932. A Phi Beta Kappa student when in college and selected as a candidate for Rhodes scholarship. Plays football because he loves it and the rougher the going the wider his smile. A fast, elusive, brainy player. Born in Akron, Ohio, May 1, 1910. Six feet, one inch tall and moves the weights at 188 pounds. First gained recognition while at West Virginia Wesleyan when he galloped distances of 98, 96 and 82 yards for touchdowns against Waynesburg College in 1930. That same Fall he gained over 400 yards in reeling off seven touchdowns against Salem College. Signed with Redskins after graduating from college in 1932.

BAUSCH, Frank J. (Pete) -- Giant center, who first attracted considerable attention as pivot man at Kansas University. Chosen on All-Missouri Valley eleven, following his brilliant all-around play in 1929, 1930 and 1931. Reported to Boston Redskins in 1934 and won a regular place. A brainy, reliable passer and a stonewall on defense. Brother of Jim Bausch, who played with Cincinnati in 1933 and won athletic renown as member of American Olympic team. Jim towers six feet two and one-half inches and tips the scales at 210 pounds. Born in Marion, South Dakota in 1908.

COLLINS, Paul Andrew (Rip) -- When you see him tear into opposing wingmen you know why he's called "Rip". One of the big reasons for the University of Pittsburgh's winning machines of 1929 and 1931. Spending his third season with the Redskins. Six feet, one inch tall and weighs 200 pounds. Born in 1907 in Danbury, Iowa, but now makes his home in Sioux City. Recalls as one of his biggest thrills knocking an enemy ball carrier cold on the first play, in his initial pro game, although he went into the game without protective shoulder pads.

CONCANNON, Ernest Raymond (Rick) -- Real native son, hailing from Waltham, where he gained his first training under Jack Leary at Waltham High. Also played under Dan Sullivan at Dean Academy in 1928. One of the bulwarks of Chick Meehan's New York University teams for three years, then tried his lot with Stapleton in the pro league. Came to Redskins in 1934. A big, rugged fellow, six feet tall, and weighing 215, who is equally at home at guard or tackle. Playing for Dean as a freshman in 1927 blocked six punts in a game with Holy Cross yearlings.

EDWARDS, Albert Glen (Turk) -- A real bone crusher from State of Washington. Likes nothing better than piling up his opponents. Great tackle and a perfect steamroller on offense. Starred for Washington State in 1930, as that eleven bowled over such opponents as Univeristy of California, Southern California, University of Washington, Oregon State College, Montana, Idaho and Gonzaga, in winning Pacific Coast Conference title. Named on several All-America teams and tackle on All-Time Rose Bowl team. Three years rated in All-Pro league selections. Twenty-seven years old, six feet, two inches in height and makes the weights sag at 259 pounds.

HOKUF, Stephen Melvin (Steve) -- Powerful red-headed giant from Nebraska Univeristy, who proved his all-around worth his first year under the big tent, playing brilliantly as an end and as a back. Playing third year with Redskins. A star on receiving passes and great in offense blocking and tackling. While at Nebraska won letters in football, track, basketball and baseball. Named All-Star Missouri Valley end in 1931 and 1932 and played in the Shrine game in San Francisco in 1932. Born in Wilber, Nebraska in 1910. A six footer and weighs around 202 pounds.

JOHNSON, Lawrence (Larry) -- Sole surviving Indian on Boston Redskins. Declared by his relatives to be a Chief of the Menominee Indian tribe, although he never pressed his title rights. Brought to Boston by Lone Star Dietz two years ago and became real hit with Boston fans. A gamester, noted around the circuit for his aggressiveness. Especially good in blocking in the line and ranks as sterling defensive player. His height of six feet, 4 inches and general ability make him useful at any line berth from end to center. Played center at Haskell in 1927, 1928 and 1929, under coach John Thomas, former University of Chicago All-American fullback. Born in 1909 at Adanah, Wisconsin. Weighs around 215 pounds.

KAHN, Edwin Bernard (King Kong) -- A real home town boy, hailing from Roxbury, although he went a long ways from home to win collegiate football renown. Starred on University of North Carolina eleven. A teammate of George Barclay, named All-American guard, and many writing experts in South rate Kahn higher than his teammate. Carries nickname of "King Kong Kahn," which may have been inspired by alliteration or by his physique. Spending his first season with Redskins. While at North Carolina was named on All-Southern, All-Jewish and other star elevens. Born in New York City in 1911, but now makes his home in Roxbury. Got his first football training under Fred Murray at English High School. Five feet, nine inches in height and weighs around 190 pounds. Twenty-three years of age.

VETERANS: Battles, Pinckert, Edwards, Collins, Hokuf,
Johnson, Rentner, Musick, McPhail, Wright,
Malone, Tosi, O'Brien, Sinko, Olsson,
Concannon, Bausch.

ALL-PROFESSIONAL PLAYERS: Turk Edwards, All-Pro tackle
Cliff Battles, All-Pro H.B.

MALONE, Charles (Charlie) -- An exceptional defensive end, excellent pass receiver and great down the field man on punts. Named on Texas All-Conference team in 1932. Also headlined in baseball, basketball and golf while at Texas A. & M. Gained honorable mention on All-America grid teams. Had tryout with Chicago Bears in 1933, but was shunted to St. Louis Gunners and made Bears regret the transfer. Fairly sparkled with powerful St. Louis eleven against National League clubs in exhibition games, among them Bears, Cardinals, Dodgers, and Packers. Quinn Henry, Gunners' Coach, declared Malone the best end he saw during season of 1933. Came to Redskins in 1934 and made good with a bang. Twenty-five years of age, six feet, four inches in height and scales 210 pounds.

MCPHAIL, Harold T. (Hal) -- Crack fullback, who first gained recognition at little Xavier College, then spent a year at West Point. Came to Redskins last season. Excellent passer and good defensive back. An all-around athlete, with special proficiency in football, baseball and tennis. Lives in Columbus, Ohio. Twenty-three years of age, six feet, one inch in height and tips the scales at 230 pounds.

MORAN, James Patrick (Jim) -- Harvard men won't soon forget this lad. He appeared to them as a one-man team, as they tried seven times to cross the Holy Cross goal line from one yard spot in a game last Fall. While at Holy Cross was named as the best guard in the East. Kind and tame and will stand without hitching off the gridiron, but a 'arin', tearin' ranger in a football game. Didn't miss a minute of his team's major football games in 1934. Andy Kerr placed Moran on his All-Eastern team and Pop Warner and Capt. John McEwan also showered special praise on him. Towers one inch over six foot mark in height and weighs around 205 pounds. Born in South Boston, in 1912, but now lives in Dorchester. Before entering Holy Cross attended Boston College High.

MUSICK, James (Jim) -- Hardest hitting line plugger in the National Football League. Devastating tackler. Out of game in 1934, after two years with Redskins, but lure of game proved too strong and he returned to the gridiron wars. Fullback on starstudded University of Southern California eleven and proved "Sweet" Musick to followers of Trojan athletics. Still the sweetest fullback that college ever had. Jazzed hopes of Pittsburgh and Tulane in East-West classics, as he ripped their lines to shreds. Jumped into pro ranks with Redskins in 1932. Twenty-five years of age, five feet, 11 inches in height and moves the weights at 195 pounds. Deputy Sheriff in Orange County, Santa Ana, California, when not lugging football down the field.

O'BRIEN, Gail Joseph (Obie) -- Sure death to opposing ball-carriers. A steady, courageous player from the potent University of Nebraska eleven of 1933. Outstanding lineman on the team on which he played a sensational game at tackle. Chosen for All-Star Missouri Valley team and All-Star Big Six Conference team in 1933. Later played in the East-West classic staged by the Shriners at San Francisco. Joined Redskins last season and made his mark with the team. Born in Cheyenne, Wyoming, in 1911, but now hangs his hat in Omaha, Nebraska in offseason. A six footer, weighing around 216 pounds.

OLSSON, Carl Lester (Swede) -- Powerful tackle from Mercer University of Macon, Georgia, who is equally at home at any line position. He cut such a swath down below the Mason and Dixon line that he won places on the S. I. A. A., and Dixie Conferences and All-State for three years. All-Southern selection and given All-America mention in 1933 and rated by Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech as the best tackle in the South, who named him on his All-American eleven. Following in the footsteps of his father, who at one time played professional football in Akron, Ohio. Swede is 26 years old and hails from Akron. He is six feet tall and weighs 225 pounds.

PINCKERT, Erny -- One of sparkplugs of Boston Redskins. A bone-crushing tackler, alert pass defender and capable ball-carrier. Recognized as the best blocking back in professional football. Super-star of the great University of Southern California elevens of 1930 and 1931. Chosen for All-American rating. In 1931 rated as the outstanding all-around player of the Nation. Born in Medford, Wisconsin in 1908, although he now makes his home in Hollywood, California. Joined the Redskins in 1932. Has one of the keenest minds in the game. In the offseason a successful business man. A six-footer, tipping the scales at 200 pounds.

RENTNER, Ernest J. (Pug) -- High-g geared backfield luminary who ran wild for Northwestern in 1931 and 1932. A superb blocker, great defensive player, ball totter par excellence and able passer. Named to a multitude of All-America elevens while in college. In 1931 gained 1,551 yards, 648 from scrimmage. Against Minnesota ran 95 yards from kickoff for touchdown. Coached his Alma Mater in 1933 and joined Redskins last season. Born in Joliet, Illinois, in 1910, and still makes his home in that city. Towers one inch over six foot mark in height and moves the weights at 182 pounds.

SHEPHERD, William (Bill) -- Gives promise of being one of the headliners of the National Football League this season. Western Maryland's widely sung halfback and leading scorer in the East. Eagerly sought after by every club in the league. A real triple-threat, as he can pass, kick and run with the best of them. Also shows rare ability as a field general. Boston football fans don't need to be told what he did to Boston College in game in 1934. His touchdown in the East-West classic this Fall added to the points he rang up for Western Maryland in the Autumn of 1934 stamped him as one of the leading scorers in the country. First saw light of day in Clearfield, Pennsylvania, in 1911, and still makes his home there. Measures five feet, nine inches, from toe to tip of head, and weighs around 190 pounds. Spending first season with Redskins.

SIEMERING, Lawrence (Larry) -- Giant center from University of San Francisco, who has already won favor with Boston fans. One of the most eagerly sought after players in college ranks after 1934 season. Played in 1935 East-West classic in Chicago and made good advance predictions of his ability. Towers six feet, three inches into ozone and tips the scales at 202 pounds. Twenty-three years of age.

SINKO, Stephen P. (Steve) -- Product of Elmer Layden's Duquesne eleven of 1933. A mighty man from the small college category. Came to Redskins in 1934 and won a regular place. Universally chosen on All-Opponent teams of almost every squad that battled the Dukes during 1932 and 1933. A devastating tackle. Hangs his hat in offseason, in Chisholm, Minnesota, where he was born in 1910. Towers three and one-half inches over the six foot mark in height and weighs 215 pounds.

TOSI, Flavio Joseph (Bull) -- Corking pass receiver, deadly tackler and speedy wingman in getting down the field under punts. Spending second season with Redskins. Brilliant end of Boston College's 1933 eleven. Voted most valuable player on the team and also chosen for All-Eastern honors. Weighs 187 pounds, but makes up for what he lacks in this respect by his fighting qualities. Six feet, one and one-half inches tall. Born in Beverly in 1912 and still makes his home there. First attracted attention while playing an end under Coaches Steve Patten and Hubba Collins at Beverly High School.

WRIGHT, Weldon (Ted) -- Redskins had to go far to get Texas Teddy Wright. Took him away from the West, where he had played with the Washington Pros of Pacific Coast League in 1933. A great back, who is a star ball-carrier, punter and passer. Also efficient place kicker. First gained fame at Texas State Teachers' College, where he was the nation's high scorer in 1932, tallying 117 points. In one game, against Austin College, he rang up 45 points in a quarter and a half. First opened his eyes in 1913 in Savoy, Texas, where he still gets his mail in the football offseason. A six footer, weighing 183 pounds.
